

What is the Idaho Junior Golf Foundation?

The Idaho Junior Golf Foundation (IJGF) was founded in 1997 as a non-profit organization to solicit tax deductible donations and grants to be used to promote and support junior golf throughout the State of Idaho. Now the purpose of the IJGF is to serve Idaho Junior golf by maintaining, supplementing, and augmenting charitable and educational programs. In particular, the IJGF has partnered with Idaho's only statewide junior golf program, the Idaho Golf Association Juniors (IGAJ) to expand the knowledge of golf to juniors through clinics, seminars and a competitive golf league. With the financial support of the IJGF, the IGAJ annually serves up to 1,000 children through its various programs. This permits the program staff the capability to coordinate championship caliber events and activities while keeping the cost down for the participants. It is the primary objective of the IJGF to introduce golf to all youth, regardless of their financial and social challenges and to promote golf as a lifetime sport. In addition to networking with the IGAJ, the IJGF provides annual scholarships and need-based assistance for youth to participate in regional, national and collegiate golf programs.

Foundation Goals

Competitive Tournaments: The Foundation provides support in sponsoring and coordinating junior events such as the IGAJ State Jr. Championship.

2—Scholarship: The Foundation annually awards the Cody Hayes college scholarship to IGA Juniors who have demonstrated their personal development through Jr. Golf and who are entering their freshman year of college.

3—Program Funding: The Foundation assists junior golf programs in Idaho who are in need of support and development to further the advancement of junior golf.

Why Help Jr. Golf

The investment in junior golf is a unique contribution to Idaho's youth. Golf allows juniors to develop personal integrity, responsibility, leadership skills and goal setting.
